Judicial Activism versus Judicial Overreach

Why in News?

The NITI Aayog has commissioned a study that will examine the economic impact of Supreme Court and National Green Tribunal judgments, including those that have a negative impact. According to sources in the NITI Aayog, the study was commissioned to CUTS (Consumer Unity and Trust Society) International a year and a half ago, and is meant to ascertain whether a framework can be created to gauge the impact of Supreme Court judgments. However, CUTS began groundwork on this study only in November 2020, as a result of delays caused due to the Covid-19 pandemic.

DEFINITION OF JUDICIAL ACTIVISM

- Black's Law Dictionary defines judicial activism as a "philosophy of judicial decision-making whereby judges allow their personal views about public policy, among other factors, to guide their decisions."
- David Strauss has argued that judicial activism can be narrowly defined as one or more of three possible actions: overturning laws as unconstitutional, overturning judicial precedent, and ruling against a preferred interpretation of the constitution.

Historical Background

- The concept of judicial activism found its roots in the English concepts of equity and natural rights.
- On the American soil, these concepts found expression in the concept of judicial review. (Marbury v. Madison 1803)

Arthur Schlesinger Jr. introduced the term “Judicial Activism” in 1947 Fortune magazine article titled “The Supreme Court: 1947”

Craig Green-

“Schlesinger's original introduction of judicial activism was doubly blurred: not only did he fail to explain what counts as activism, he also declined to say whether activism is good or bad.”

Role of Indian Diaspora in making India Self Reliant

Why in News?

Prime Minister of India urged the Indian diaspora to use made in India products to popularize Brand India in the countries they live in to, in turn, boost the government’s “Atmanirbhar Bharat” programme. Addressing the 16th Pravasi Bhartiya Diwas–celebrated on 9 January every year to mark the return of Mahatma Gandhi to India from South Africa in 1915–Modi also invited non-resident Indians (NRIs) and people of Indian origin settled abroad to invest in India through the new production-linked investment opportunities outlined by the government in recent months.
